

POST-SCRIPTS

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

Every day there's something new, Of what folks think, or say, or do. Think how drab this world would be If there was not variety.

That Sioux name for President Coolidge—Still Water—shows that the impartial red man when it comes to politics plays no favorites between the wets and dries.

In claiming that we haven't the manufacturing facilities for bringing our navy up to the ratio the British representatives at the disarmament conference underestimate the capacity of their paper mills.

Ban Johnson steps out, scorning $320,000 of pay that he might have drawn. We have often wanted to be as sore as that on somebody, but we couldn't afford it.

Folks doubtless will be too kind to draw another possible inference from the fact that Henry Ford never read what Col. George Harvey with prophetic vision used to call the "Dearlyborn Independent."

Everything at the Philadelphia Sesqui is going to be auctioned off except the deficit.

Danish aviator is going to hop over on the installment plan. "Yump, Johannsen, you can do it in two jumps!"

If that Ambassadorship to Mexico is left open too long General New's air mail service over the Rio Grande may demonstrate the extravagance of keeping anybody there but a reliable fourth-class postmaster.

Boston reports a turtle holding up traffic, whereas if this had happened in Philadelphia the traffic would have held up the turtle. News is largely a matter of environment.

It is understood that President Doumergue now sleeps in the fire engine house so that when an American aviator lands in Paris he can rush out on the first alarm.

Ambassador Herrick gets a cordial invitation not to come to the Black Hills.

Gov. Ritchie finds we are suffering the tyranny of too many laws. There ought to be a law against it.

It seems that the Institute of Chemistry has found out what's the matter with the American automobile and is getting ready to put it on a strict diet.

Recanting Baptist denies he said that the young people of his town held their drinking parties in the church—they don't go there.

Henry Ford has made apology and shut off the gas works but from last accounts Senator Helfin was still baling up his speeches.

The original plan of the Washington Monument called for a highly ornamental base, a sort of cross between a Greek temple and a Roman sentry box, but happily the money gave out, and so we have today the thing of beauty and the joy forever that is found only in simplicity. We lack too much confidence in modern artists to imagine that they can paint the lily.

Levine has had a falling out now with everybody except Drouhin, and we certainly hope this doesn't happen while they're en route.

As there is some kind of water in the President's Indian name naturally it leaked out.

Somebody seems to have pulled a lawsuit right out from under Jim Reed.

Scientists predict that the lava of Kilauea eventually will fill the entire crater, which is eight miles in circumference and 600 feet deep. There's enough mud for a whole campaign.

Miss Constance Talmadge's divorce suit will be one of the most sensational in the annals of Hollywood. It will contain nothing sensational.

We trust that the purchase of the garbage reduction plant had the approval of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Fine Arts boys.

Navy aviator brings a record back from Italy without leaving California.

It is understood that the South Pole Reception Committee has decided to confer upon Byrd the Antarctic's highest decoration—a sastruga pinned on by an icicle.

Congratulations to the Twelfth Precinct upon having no traffic casualties during the last year and a half. Not every precinct can boast that everybody in it own an automobile.

American success at Geneva is absolutely assured—we had given up everything we had before it started.

CRITICISM OF U. S. AGGRAVATES CRISIS AT NAVAL PARLEY

Bridgeman Calls Types of Vessels Favored "Offensive."

REACTION IN GENEVA HELD UNFAVORABLE

Previously Delegates Smiled Leaving Meeting Devoted to Talk of Cruisers.

Geneva, July 8 (A.P.).—The crisis in the tripartite naval conference suddenly became worse tonight.

Moving from defense to attack in explaining the British position, W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the British admiralty, used the words "offensive" and "aggressive" in describing those large size types of warships, and especially cruisers, which the American delegation has been insisting on the right to maintain as best suited to the national needs of the United States.

Mr. Bridgeman, talking to the press, painted a Great Britain which seeks only to protect her security by possessing a certain desirable number of small sized "defensive" warships. While alluding to the United States he declared that it is impossible to reduce the total tonnages in the various categories of warships if the maximum tonnage of individual warships is to be pushed up until they become aggressive types.

The first lord's declaration caused a reaction in American circles which is characterized as "unfavorable" at the least because it has created the impression generally in Geneva that to the British way of thinking the United States is seeking large-sized individual warships because such warships are offensive and even aggressive.

U. S. Against Smaller Cruisers.

Mr. Bridgeman's statement is understood to be founded on the fact that in discussing individual sizes of destroyers and submarines, the American delegation advocated making the maximum displacement slightly higher than the British and on the fact that the Americans adopted an unyielding attitude toward the British attempt to secure an agreement whereby the 10,000-ton cruisers authorized at Washington would eventually disappear altogether in favor of 7,500-ton cruisers. The American delegation has fought for an agreement to make the total tonnage of warships as low as possible, and has been backed by Japan in its endeavor.

The Americans and Japanese have taken this stand because they are convinced that a genuine move toward disarmament and economy can be achieved only by a treaty which limits total tonnages and establishes levels beyond which the nations agree not to go.

The British demand is for the right to maintain and replace cruisers whose total tonnage would far exceed the limits suggested by the United States and Japan. Acceptance of this, it is contended, would force both the United States and Japan into an increased, instead of reduced, building program.

11 Refugees of Flood Drown on Way Home

New Orleans, July 8 (A.P.).—Eleven negroes, flood refugees, were drowned at Port Barre today when a flatboat on which they were being returned to their homes at Woodside and Melville, overturned at Port Barre, the Associated Press learned over long distance telephone from Red Cross representatives.

"Red Rose" Slayer Is Sentenced to Die

Los Angeles, July 8 (A.P.).—Earl Clark, known as the "Red Rose Murderer," today was sentenced to be hanged at San Quentin Penitentiary, September 23, for the slaying of Charles Silva, at Harbor City, near San Pedro, in 1925.

It was a red rose, worn in the hair of Mayme Stephens, a girl over whom the slaying occurred, which caused the case to be known as the red rose murder. Testimony was that the rose was a sign to Silva that she would leave the house where she was staying to go with him.

Sesqui's Property All to Be Auctioned

Special to The Washington Post. Philadelphia, July 8.—Everything from cups and saucers to shrubbery and the 81 buildings on the grounds of the Sesquiennial International Exposition will be sold at six auction sales, the first of which will be held Monday, July 18, it was announced today.

Youth, Under Strain Of Study, Hangs Self

Chicago, July 8 (A.P.).—The strain of study incidents to his final days at high school from which he was graduated last month was given by his parents as the reason 18-year-old Mason Carlton hanged himself at his home last night.

Sheffield's Mexican Post To Be Left Open for Time

Schoenfeld Likely to Be in Charge of U. S. Affairs for Two Months, Says Coolidge, Following on Resignation of Envoy.

Case Involving Standard Oil Subsidiary Held to Be Most Serious That Has Arisen Under the Rule of President Calles.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

Rapid City, S. Dak., July 8.—This country's ambassadorship at Mexico City will be left open for the time being, it was made known by the President today, following the announcement of the resignation of Ambassador James R. Sheffield. His resignation will be accepted, it was announced, but for a time, probably two months, this country's affairs in the Mexican capital will be left in the hands of Charge Schoenfeld.

There is no plan to leave the ambassador's post vacant indefinitely, it was made plain, and it will most likely remain so any longer than it would if Mr. Sheffield were simply in this country on leave and expecting to return. Many names have been submitted as successors to Mr. Sheffield, but the President would not discuss any of them.

It is not considered that there is any need for haste in appointing his successor. Charge Schoenfeld, it was explained, has been long at the capital.

PHYSICIAN AND WIDOW ADMIT CAUSING KILLING

Lured Her Husband Onto Lake, Where Trapper Slew Him, Confession Stated.

WERE LINKED BY GOSSIP

Franklin, La., July 8 (A.P.).—Their names linked in small-town gossip for the past two years, Mrs. Ida Le Bouef and Dr. Thomas Derher, prominent Morgan City physician, today admitted the conspiracy which caused her husband, James J. Le Bouef, to be lured to a lake and slain.

As a result, Emil Vuilleumont, district attorney, announced that a special term of court would be called soon to try Mrs. Le Bouef, Dr. Derher and Dr. Thomas Beadle, a trapper, who did the actual slaying, according to the confessions.

Gossip had connected the names of the 48-year-old physician and the 38-year-old mother of four children for two years, Sheriff Charles Pecot said. In confessions to the officials, the physician and the woman told of a pre-arranged plan for Mrs. Le Bouef to lure her husband on a boat ride on Lake Faloude last Friday night, when he was slain by Beadle.

Mrs. Le Bouef said she had planned the boat trip and had insisted that she and her husband take separate boats because she did not wish to be in the skiff when her husband was killed.

"I followed in my boat about 50 feet behind Jim," she was quoted as telling Sheriff Pecot. "When we passed the schoolhouse, Dr. Derher and Beadle came up in their boat to within 4 feet of my husband. The doctor shouted, 'Is that you, Jim?' Before Jim had a chance to answer, he was shot."

Family of 3 Missing On Trip to Norfolk

Gallipolis, Ohio July 8 (A.P.).—Police of several cities have been asked to search for Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Myers and their 6-year-old daughter, of Rio Grande, Ohio, who have not been heard from since they left home on June 25 in a new automobile for Norfolk, Va., where Dr. Myers had been appointed interne at the Government Naval Hospital.

Relatives became concerned when officials at Norfolk telephoned today that they had not arrived at Norfolk. Dr. Myers, his parents said, had promised to write from various towns they passed through en route to Norfolk, but they have heard nothing.

Rockefeller Is Happy On 88th Anniversary

New York, July 8 (A.P.).—His four-score and eighth birthday found John D. Rockefeller, Standard Oil king, attending to business, playing a little golf and enjoying a motor trip over the countryside, with nothing by way of celebration to make the day especially significant at his Pocantico Hills estate.

"I am happy to pass my eighty-eighth birthday in a condition of perfect health, full of hope and cheer and gratitude and with good will to everybody," Mr. Rockefeller was quoted.

Preacher Suspended For Airplane Wedding

Berlin, July 8 (A.P.).—Berlin's "Flying Sky Pilot," the Rev. Herbert Teichmann, who officiated at Tuesday's double wedding in an airplane, has been suspended from office by the Evangelical Church Consistory, which rejects aerial marriages on the score that they are a degradation of a serious religious ceremony.

Criticism of the Rev. Mr. Teichmann is not confined to church circles, as the newspapers generally condemn the innovation which one writer declares brought the church into competition with mundane sports.

6 NEW WORLD RECORDS ARE SET BY NAVY FLIER

Lieut. Byron Connell, With Loaded 2-Engine Flying Boat, Breaks Marks.

OLD TIME IS DOUBLED

San Diego, Calif., July 8 (A.P.).—Lieut. Byron Connell, naval aviator, today smashed at least six world's records and established two new marks for two-engine flying boats carrying loads of 1,000 and 2,000 kilograms, an unofficial check showed here tonight.

Connell landed at 6:24 p. m., after having been in the air 11 hours 7 minutes and 18 seconds. He piloted a naval seaplane.

In addition to new duration and distance records established by Lieut. Connell, he succeeded in bringing back to the United States from Italy the duration record for the load carried.

The Italian record in the air was 5 hours and 41 minutes, and Connell's time almost doubles the former mark for duration.

James Ross' Pictures Are Sold for $680,000

London, July 8 (A.P.).—High prices were realized in the picture sales at Christie's today, and the James Ross collection of 30 pictures, brought from Montreal, sold for 136,000 guineas (approximately $680,000). The total realized from the sale was £192,417, nearly $1,000,000.

Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Man," formerly called "Admiral Tromp," brought 30,000 guineas. Reynolds' portrait of Lady Ann Fitzpatrick made 18,000 guineas. Seventeen thousand guineas was paid for Romney's portrait of Lady Sullivan, and Turner's picture of Venice realized 20,000 guineas.

Frans Hals' "Portrait of a Man" brought 5,000 guineas. It is believed that this picture is intended for America.

8 PERISH IN FLAMES; PAINTER IS ACCUSED

Cigarette Ignited Apartment in Vancouver, Police Charges Say.

Vancouver, B. C., July 8 (A.P.).—Eight persons were believed tonight to have been burned to death or died from burns and injuries in a fire in the Royal Alexandra Apartment House in the West End of Vancouver this afternoon. Six bodies have been recovered.

Among those reported dead were: Mrs. Grace Tuckhart, of Toronto; Dick Fitzgerald, of Edmonton, Alta. Those reported missing include Dr. John Barber.

The blaze, starting on the fourth floor, rapidly spread to the fifth and sixth stories of the seven-story building and trapped men, women and children, while police and firemen fought to save them.

David Henderson, painter, who turned in the alarm, was formally charged with manslaughter. The complaint alleges that the fire started when sparks from a cigarette he was smoking ignited a can of liquid with which he was removing paint from the floor of the fourth story corridor.

British Arm Fliers Against Air Bandits

Croydon, England, July 8 (A.P.).—Imperial Airways pilots are being armed with revolvers as a precaution against aerial robbery.

So much bullion is now being carried by Imperial Airways airplanes that the officials are taking no chances. It has been pointed out that it would be possible for any of these bullion-carrying airplanes to be shot down in an out-of-the-way spot and a robbery carried out with small likelihood of detection.

FORD-SAPIRO SUIT NEAR SETTLEMENT AFTER RETRACTION

Stopping Criticism of Jews Likely to End Libel Action.

LONG NEGOTIATIONS PRECEDED APOLOGY

J. A. Reed, of Counsel for Auto Maker, Knows of No Such Deal, He Asserts.

Detroit, July 8 (A.P.).—Probability of out-of-court-settlement of all litigation pending against Henry Ford as a result of articles reflecting upon the Jewish people published in his Dearborn Independent looked today as the immediate effect of a statement by Mr. Ford repudiating the articles and announcing that such writings never again will appear in the columns of the Independent.

Mr. Ford's statement, copyrighted by the New York American and given out through Arthur Brisbane, expressed "great regret" over any injury the articles may have caused, and added that a survey he had made showed him that "this journal (the Independent), in tended to be constructive and not destructive, had been made the medium for resurrecting exploded fictions." The statement concluded with the assurance that "henceforth they (the Jews) may look to me for friendship and good will."

Following publication of Mr. Ford's statement, it developed today that counsel for Aaron Sapiro, who has a $1,000,000 libel suit pending against the automobile manufacturer, had been active in negotiations that led to its issuance.

Negotiations on Some Time.

William Henry Gallagher, chief counsel for Mr. Sapiro, said at his offices here that the negotiations had been under way for some time, and that Walter F. Lynch, of Chicago, law associate of Mr. Sapiro, had been here for a fortnight in connection with the Ford statement. Gallagher added that he "confidently expects" settlement out of court of the Sapiro suit. The possibility that a suit filed against Mr. Ford by Herman Bernstein, New York writer, might also be affected by the Ford repudiation, was seen in the fact that Louis Marshall, New York attorney, who holds the original signed statement of Mr. Ford, is counsel for Bernstein.

While Mr. Gallagher was voicing the expectation that the Sapiro suit would be settled out of court and that Mr. Ford's statement gave Mr. Sapiro the vindication he sought, Stewart Hanley, of local counsel for Ford, said that so far as he knew there was no connection between the statement and the libel suit.

Mr. Sapiro and his counsel, however, are known to be not opposed to an out-of-court settlement. Shortly after

DeMille Is Accused Of Julian Case Usury

Los Angeles, July 8 (A.P.).—The Julian Petroleum Corporation stock scandal penetrated more deeply into the ranks of prominent men today when Cecil B. DeMille, millionaire film producer and bank director, was charged with usury. The complaint was issued by Dr. E. J. Lickley, city prosecutor, who is conducting a second investigation into alleged usurious participation by scores of men in refinancing Julian pool loans.

The complaint against the movie producer charges that DeMille loaned the corporation $92,000 for 45 days, collecting interest of more than 20 per cent, or about $12,000.

Already more than 50 persons have been indicted in connection with over-issuance of stock in the corporation.

Drouhin In the Columbia, Flies to England and Back

Chamberlin Goes Along as Far as British Field With Frenchman and Promoter; Is Through With Levine, He Announces.

Le Bourget, France, July 8 (A.P.).—Maurice Drouhin, the French flier, on his arrival here tonight, after piloting the monoplane Columbia to Croydon, England, and back, declared that he was satisfied with the American airplane and confirmed that he intended to fly from Paris to New York Drouhin said he found the Columbia easy to pilot, but wanted to change the compass before trying the transatlantic flight.

Clarence D. Chamberlin, New York-to-Germany flier, said good-by to France today when he took the transatlantic Columbia, probably for the last time, into the air from the civil flying field here, headed for London.

Beside him sat Drouhin, French long-distance flier, who, if all goes well, will fly the Columbia over the Atlantic and back to Roosevelt Field, New York, some time in August.

Charles A. Levine, owner of the plane, who will accompany Drouhin in the attempt, also went along on today's hop. He had found a few inches of space, just enough to let him lie down comfortably, of the gasoline tank. The start was made at 12:33 p. m.

There was only a small crowd at the field, for the weather was wet and unpleasant. Among them was the American Charge d'Affaires, Sheldon Whitehouse.

SLAIN MAN'S WIDOW LINKS OTHER WOMAN WITH DEAD HUSBAND

Minister Tells Police of Revelation Made by Mrs. E. L. Mills.

POLICE INTERVIEW NEIGHBOR AND WIFE

New Witnesses Say Man Clad in Black Fled Scene Just After Crime.

The name of a married woman with whom Edward L. Mills, prosperous farmer of Hunting Mill, Md., is said to have been involved yesterday was given to the authorities investigating Mills' murder early Thursday morning.

The Rev. H. H. Nicholl, pastor of the Trillick Baptist Church, said that Mrs. Bertha Mills, widow of the slain man, had admitted to him that she suspected her husband of being unfaithful and had given him the name of the woman involved.

The Rev. Mr. Nicholl immediately notified State's Attorney Robert Peter and Lieut. James E. Manning, of the Baltimore detective bureau, and these two hastened to talk to Mrs. Mills.

Afterward they declined to comment on their interview with the widow, saying that they had talked to her in confidence and a late hour the investigators said that nothing important had developed as a result of what they had been told.

Woman Has Young Child.

The woman in question is married and has a small child. The note that was pinned on Mills' shirt when his body was found accused him of having assaulted a young married woman with a child. The theory is that he was killed by a jealous husband.

Clarence Mills, 20-year-old farm hand and the sole witness of the actual murder, was arrested last night, but his arrest had no direct connection with the crime. He was lodged in the Rockville jail as a fugitive from justice, the charge being that he had escaped from the Marlboro jail, where he was held charged with stealing automobile parts.

Marlboro authorities had read in the newspapers that Mills witnessed the murder of Mills, and immediately asked the Rockville police to place him under arrest.

Man and Wife Questioned.

State's Attorney Peter and Lieut. Manning talked to a number of persons yesterday, including Mr. and Mrs. Harry Farley, of Trillick, Md., and Mrs. Farley knew Mr. Mills for a number of years, and he had patronized their grocery store.

The Farleys live about 2 miles from the Mills farm, and attend the same church. Both of them said yesterday that they believed Mills had been slain by a man who knew him well.

Farley praised Mills and said that she did not believe that he had had any affair with a married woman in recent years, although she said she knew he was a bit "gay" when he was a young man.

There are some who believed that the "confession" pinned to Mills' shirt was a hoax, one reason being that a Beaton

Fewer Marriages And Divorces Here

Marriages and divorces both decreased in Washington during 1926, according to statistics made public yesterday by the Department of Commerce.

During the year 5,514 marriages were performed, a decrease of 139, compared with the previous year. Only 96 divorces were granted, as compared with 158 in 1925. The divorce figures do not include twenty annulments granted during 1926.

TWELFTH PRECINCT ALONE IN CITY VOID OF TRAFFIC DEATHS

None There in 18 Months While Total for Capital Includes 115.

HARLAND HAS MAP PINNING FATALITIES

Second Precinct Worst, With 22 "Graves;" Test Begun for Glaring Headlights.

The Twelfth Precinct, one of the largest in the city, embracing Woodridge, Brookland and other neighboring communities, has the distinction of being the only precinct in the city void of a fatality from an automobile accident in the last year and a half.

This is an unusual commendation for Woodridge, Brookland and other communities in the Twelfth Precinct, for the traffic is heavier perhaps than in any other suburban precinct in the city.

In the office of W. H. Harland, traffic director, there is a map with pins, stuck at places where automobile fatalities occurred in the city during 1926 and so far this year. Yellow pins represent death during the day in 1926, and black-dotted yellow pins deaths at night in 1926. Red pins and red pins with black spots in the center, represent the fatalities day and night so far this year.

Symbolical of Graveyard.

The map may be regarded as symbolical of a graveyard, each pin the headstone of a grave, since the pins indicate the exact locations of accidents in the streets resulting in graves.

The graves are thickest in the downtown section. The Second Precinct has most—22 graves. Four of the graves were created in the day in 1926 and seven at night. Six have been created in the day in the precinct so far this year, and five at night. Therefore the precinct's record is growing worse, for eleven persons have been killed by automobiles within its limits this year. This is exactly the number killed during the whole of last year.

The entire city graveyard has in it 115 graves, 76 of which were created last year and 39 up to the present time this year. At this rate, which seems to be fairly steady, this graveyard will grow to the proportions of a real cemetery within the next few years. This will be the case unless the miracle can be performed of teaching drivers and pedestrians alike to be careful.

Fewer Deaths in Suburbs.

From the heavy sprinkling in the downtown section the graves taper out into the suburbs, where they become scattered.

However, the whole of the Twelfth Precinct is conspicuously blank, not one "grave" in the section. Not one has been created on this part of the map. There should exist in this section a joint association of automobilists and pedestrians, and the association should be given a silver cup, or some other token of honor and notice, for unwittingly, perhaps, setting up this record.

The Twelfth Precinct, embracing a wide area, including the Brightwood section, has the next best record, with only two fatalities during the period stated. Both occurred in 1926. No graves have been created by automobiles in the section so far this year. Both fatalities last year occurred at night.

The Twelfth Precinct's record is remarkable, considering that almost all of Rhode Island avenue beyond North Capitol street is in the precinct. There is a large stretch of Bladensburg road to be considered, and Michigan avenue, a heavy traffic artery.

Motor Count on Avenues.

In the traffic count recently completed this part of Rhode Island avenue showed 1,696 cars passing in two hours, from 4 to 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Bladensburg road showed a traffic of 1,719 cars during the two hours. On Michigan avenue there was a traffic of 1,087 cars at this time of day, when there is an average of 2,250 cars an hour pass on these three arteries in the Twelfth Precinct. No other suburban precinct in the city has as many large traffic arteries with traffic so heavy.

Two other suburban precincts, however, have a single traffic artery with heavier traffic than any of these three. Georgia avenue, in the Thirteenth Precinct, has a traffic of 2,423 cars at one point. Neither of the two fatalities in that precinct occurred on Georgia avenue.

Four graves have been made in the part of the map embraced by the Fourteenth Precinct. Two occurred on Connecticut avenue, which, with a traffic count of 2,272 cars in the two hours, is the heaviest artery in the section. Three occurred in 1926, and one so far this year.

Four graves were made in the territory of the Eleventh Precinct. Two occurred in Anacostia. Two occurred last year, and two so far this year. Therefore

NORTH BEACH POLICE ARE CHARGED WITH RUNNING AUTO RAR

Calvert State's Attorney to Start Inquiry Following
Capital Complaint.

WASHINGTONIAN SAYS PARTY WAS "APPRAISED"

Declares Motorists From Here
Are Forced to Undergo Indignities.

Maryland State officials have been urged to investigate an alleged automobile "trap" at North Beach by Frank C. Kraus, 61 B street northeast, who yesterday complained of conditions there started in the reverse direction when he visited the resort recently with four companions. Washington motorists, according to Kraus, are forced to undergo indignities at the hands of police there.

Kraus described a trip which he took to North Beach on Sunday morning, July 2, and which he said was a "trap" for motorists. He was unable to reach the place until about 2 o'clock in the morning. Since it was impossible to obtain a license at such an hour, he parked on the beach with numerous machines.

Tells of Auction on Fines.

"Hardly five minutes passed," he said, "when a plainclothes officer presented himself and invited us to the town hall, where the five of us were placed in a cell while the officers held a get-together conference to determine the amount of our fine. Finally, $5 a head was decided on on a charge of disorderly conduct. We refused to pay this fine, and then the auction of fines started in the reverse direction. First we were released for $3 (60 cents each). Disorderly conduct charges in their little town include a parking trap, no parking after 12 o'clock at night, no signs, but plenty of darkness, plainclothes men and 'justice'."

Arthur W. Dowell, State's attorney for Calvert County, has announced that he will conduct an investigation of charges made by Kraus and other motorists who have written letters complaining of police tactics at North Beach. There have been numerous cases similar to that described by the Washingtonian in which motorists from Baltimore and other places in Maryland have been treated in almost the same way, it was declared.

Babies and Patients Carried From Fire

Milwaukee, Wis., July 8 (A.P.).—More than 100 patients, including several babies, expectant mothers and mothers who within the last few days have been subjects of serious operations, were carried to safety from a burning hospital when fire broke out and for a time threatened to destroy the whole wing of St. Joseph's Hospital here tonight.

Heroism of the Catholic sisters and nurses, who formed a human chain along which those of the patients who were able to walk were passed from hand to hand, was responsible for the saving of numerous lives.

The fire broke out in the ceiling of the operating room.

POSSE OF 75 SCOURS WOODS FOR BOY OF 5

Bloodhounds from the reformatory at Occoquan, Va., will be brought to the spot where Harold was last seen, Bennett said, and allowed to smell the boy's clothing in the hope that they may be able to pick up the child's trail.

The child, who is only about 3 feet tall, was wearing a blue and white suit. He has fair hair and complexion, and is rather stout. An unidentified man reported to the searchers last night that he had seen a boy in a red bathing suit walking along a path near the river bank, toward Chain Bridge.

Charles Birgit, leader of the Harbor Precinct squad, and William Reynolds, veteran riverman, pointed out that had the child drowned they would have surely located the body with grappling hooks more than 1,000 yards downstream from the beach and beyond the middle of the river without success. The river bottom is smooth at this point and the current slow, so they would have no trouble finding the boy's body if he had drowned, they pointed out.

Man Injured In Fall.

Jesse Garner, 46 years old, of 86 L street northeast, was severely injured about the head and face when he fell to the curb in front of 1019 Sixth street northeast last night, after being struck by a car at Casualty Hospital for a fractured nose and bruises about the left eye.

Lois Boyd to Be Bride.

Los Angeles, Calif., July 8 (A.P.).—The Examiner says a marriage license has been obtained by Lois Boyd, 22, film actress, and Lou Erickson, 23, orchestra leader here. Miss Boyd formerly was with the Ziegfeld Follies.

Break-up of Arms Parley Would Be Victory for U. S.

Determination of American Delegates Not to Yield on Cardinal Principles Means Success, Whether or Not a Treaty Results.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

Unless the unexpected happens, American success at the Geneva tripartite naval conference is regarded here as assured. The temporary deadlock over cruiser tonnage, the diplomatic maneuver of the British to maintain supremacy of the seas and the efforts of the Japanese to break away from the 5-5-3 ratio and gain advantage for Japan are all matters of secondary importance, it is explained in official circles, as compared to the following major considerations:

First—America is ready and willing to sign an agreement which will follow the principles originally laid down by President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg and result in a genuine extension of the limitations on naval armament agreed upon at the Washington Conference of 1921-1922, and the accomplishment of this American aim would, it is felt, be received with acclaim by the people of the United States.

Second—America is not ready or willing to sign an agreement which does not follow the original principles contained in the American proposal, and if Great Britain and Japan do not intend to extend the Washington Conference limitations and therefore will not sign a treaty on this basis, an abandonment of the conference would be added, be viewed by the American people as a relinquishment of further efforts to limit armaments, and would be hailed with as much enthusiasm as a triumph.

In a nutshell, the American delegates do not intend to have to reach an agreement with the British and the Japanese to achieve what is so frequently termed a "diplomatic victory."

Hugh S. Gibson, heading the American delegation, and his associates, will not in any event come away from the conference empty handed. They will either succeed in reaching an agreement which they will succeed in notifying, if not warning, the American people that the leading naval powers are not genuinely and sincerely committed to the principles of limiting naval armaments. And this warning, if it comes, will be a valuable asset to the American people.

There has, incidentally, been a widespread impression among the people of the United States that it is futile to really expect foreign powers to limit armaments without gaining some advantage to themselves aside from the general advantage that comes from reducing the burdens of their taxpayers. In this sense, it is regarded as high time to clear the atmosphere so that the American people may know whether the limitation of armaments is to be carried out in earnest or to be used merely as a pawn on the international chessboard.

Secretary Kellogg, who has been guiding the American deliberations in matters of major policy, has maneuvered the United States into the sort of preferential position which the British are usually found to be occupying in international conferences. In other words, he has placed his cards in such a manner as to assure American success, no matter which way the final wind-up to the conference comes. If it proceeds in reaching agreement.

It is very doubtful if the Senate would ever ratify a treaty based on compromise of the cardinal American principles. The temper of the American people, as reflected in the last Senate action on the limitation of naval armaments idea. President Coolidge's appeal to the Congress to desist in being in a hurry to reach an agreement, 10,000-ton cruisers fell upon deaf ears and the Congress reversed him. The President's statement that a new party on limitation of armaments was imminent and that the construction should be held up as a consequence of a fertile field for the future.

Among the British and Japanese delegations that the United States desired to reach an agreement, even at the expense of compromise, was the agreement which apparently met America's wishes but contained hooks here and there for the British and Japanese would be welcomed by Secretary Kellogg and Mr. Gibson.

The involved technical questions and the juggling of cruiser and destroyer tonnage and other points too intricate for the average citizen to understand seemingly made the conference a fertile field for the future.

George Johnson, of Coleville, notified County Policeman Harry Burdine, of Rockville, that the body of Jacob Burdine, a well-known local sportsman, was found in a wooded ravine near Hollywood Park, a new real estate development, near Coleville.

Dr. William Pratt, county health officer, son of Officer Burdine, was notified of the discovery. The body was brought to the county health officer's office, where it was examined. The body was found in a wooded ravine near Hollywood Park, a new real estate development, near Coleville.

Final testimony in the trial of the Rev. Alfred E. Barrows, pastor of the Eastern Presbyterian Church, was presented to the judicial commission of the Washington Presbytery at a three-hour session last night, in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The pastor is accused of having committed the crime of incest with his daughter.

The Rev. Wallace Radcliffe, chairman of the commission, said another meeting would be held Monday, at which a decision would be reached. The commission, composed of four ministers, is charged with the duty of making a final decision on the case.

McMillan, 56-year-old widow, who was arrested July 2 at her apartment at the Chastleton and charged with violating the prohibition laws, was placed on probation for a year yesterday by Judge Mattingly in Police Court on her plea of guilty. Harry T. Whalen, counsel for the accused, explained that she was in desperate circumstances.

NEW POLICE STATION
FORMALLY OPENED
Reception at Fourteenth Precinct Building Attended by Dougherty and Hesse.

More than 600 persons, coming from all parts of the city, attended the formal opening of the Fourteenth Precinct Station House last night. The impromptu reception committee was headed by District Commissioner Proctor L. Dougherty, Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, superintendent of police, and Capt. William G. Stott, commander of the precinct.

Delegations from the following citizens' associations presented Capt. Stott with floral tributes and wishes of success: Cathedral Heights, Conduit Road, American University Park, Chevy Chase, Richmond Park, Connecticut Avenue, Burleigh, Northwestern Suburban and Devonshire Downs. Other police officials in the receiving line were Inspectors Charles Evans, Louis Stoll, Albert J. Headley, Capt. Fred Cornwell and Lieutenants McGill Groves and Sidney J. Marks.

The new station house is situated at Forty-third place and Albermarle street northwest. It is a two-story structure, of Georgian Colonial type, and is the most modern of the new police stations in the District. Although he was arrested Tuesday, Thomas G. Colman, 30 years old, 3825 Wisconsin avenue northwest, has the "honor" of being the first prisoner to occupy one of the new cells. He was charged with intoxication and was given a suspended sentence in Police Court. Refreshments were served to visitors and had to be replenished an hour after the reception started.

Colored Clubwomen
Plan for Convention
Plans were perfected last night at a meeting of the executive committee of the District of Columbia Association of Colored Women's Clubs, at the residence of Lillian Maxwell, 1902 R street northwest, for entertainment of the Northern Federation of Women's Clubs, which will meet in annual three-day sessions at the Metropolitan Hotel, August 3.

The convention delegates will be guests of the State organization, which has headquarters here. Reports to this organization were made by the E. C. Carter Club and the Ida N. Ross Club, and tokens of remembrance were sent to Mrs. L. N. Ross, founder of the federation, who is ill. Mrs. I. A. Baltimore reported visitation of Walter Reed and Howard Hughes, and the distribution of cigarettes and fruit.

Wife Wins Divorce. Mrs. Margaret LeClair was awarded a decree for limited divorce by Justice Bailey in Equity Court against Henry A. LeClair, a draftsman. The parties were married December 29, 1921. Mrs. LeClair said she was deserted in March, 1926. She is allowed $50 a month alimony. Attorney Henry Gilligan appeared for her.

CAMPAIGN ORGANIZED TO EQUAL RIGHTS

Woman's Party to Extend Work to Voters Living in the Country.

HOME-MAKING IS PRAISED

Colorado Springs, Colo., July 8 (A.P.). The members of the National Women's Party made it plain today at their annual convention that their campaign for equal rights amendment to the Federal Constitution will be prosecuted thoroughly.

The fight to make women equal with men before the law, which heretofore has received its support chiefly from women in the larger cities, is to be carried to the rural regions.

Miss Maud Younger, chairman of the party's congressional committee, intends to revive her famous card catalogue system for the rural women. This consists of keeping a minute record of the attitude and actions of all members of Congress with respect to the equal rights proposal. It was used successfully in the campaign for equal suffrage, which resulted in the nineteenth amendment.

The every-day duty of being a homemaker was extolled by Mrs. Thomas Winters, of Dayton, Ohio, as being one of the most worthwhile and dignified of the rural woman's activities. Declaration of recognition of the home maker as a professional woman was a necessary step in the progress of American feminism.

Local Self-Government Offers

French Lick, Ind., July 8 (A.P.).—The United States is passing from a government of law to a government of men, and a power that often approaches tyranny has been vested in the Federal Government, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland declared in an address here today before the annual meeting of the Indiana State Bar Association.

"The government is no longer the creature and protector of our individual rights, but is rapidly becoming the dictator of them," the speaker asserted. "Today local self-government furnishes the only efficient, effective, workable basis on which the diversified and changing problems in our diversified and changing land can ever be practically settled."

Gov. Ritchie's address followed an oration by Nathan Levey, of South Bend, president of the 1927 annual high school oratorical contest conducted by the bar association on "The Constitution."

The American government has become the most regulatory in the western world, outside of Russia and Italy, Gov. Ritchie asserted. He stated that inspectors and spies and official regulators follow the American from the day he takes his first nourishment. "Here he is told what he may eat, where he may smoke, and everywhere where he may drink. What he may read or write or see on the stage is prescribed, too, and not without this, his government advises him how to hang his curtains in his home, what meat to cook for his Christmas dinner and how to spend his money."

Permission was sought from the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by the Hill groups of railroads in the Northwest to consolidate the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern into a single system.

A new company, known as the Great Northern Pacific, has been organized for the purpose of consolidating the application said, and the majority of stockholders of both the Northern Pacific and Great Northern have deposited their shares in readiness to carry out the consolidation.

By the plan presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission the Great Northern Pacific Co. would issue 4,970,976 shares of its common stock, 2,479,988 shares of which would be exchanged for the outstanding stock of the Northern Pacific and the balance of 2,490,988 shares exchanged for the stock of the Great Northern Co.

JUST FOLKS

Jesus and the Disciples tried to take a day off. They needed a vacation. Desiring quiet, they got into a boat and sailed across the sea of Galilee. The crowds watched them from the shore and ran around on land. When the noise of the boat pushed into the sand, there was the waiting multitude. Jesus did not rail at them or scold himself, but had compassion on them and passed the day teaching and preaching to them. He fed their souls with the bread of life and performed a matchless miracle that 5,000 men, women and children might be fed.

Folks are the most attractive things on earth. If you are a Christian worker and do not love folks, you will have a hard time. Arnold of Rugby, that prince of teachers and inspirer of youth, said that when he could allow a boy to enter his school without his emotions being stirred he would know it was time to quit. It is better to teach a boy to love virtue and scorn a lie than it is to build an airship that will fly to the moon.

NEW YORK MINISTER WILL OCCUPY PULPIT AT THEATER SERVICE

Guest Preacher to Conduct
First Congregational Meeting at Metropolitan.

ASSISTANT TO PREACH
AT COVENANT CHURCH

Delaware Clergyman to Deliver
Sermon at All Souls' Unitarian.

The Rev. George Luther Cady, of New York, will be the guest preacher of the first congregational meeting at the Metropolitan church at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. His subject will be "The Kingdom of Heaven—How and When?"

Dr. Cady held several important pastorates in Michigan, his native State, and Massachusetts, and for several years has been the senior secretary of the American Missionary Association, a religious corporation with several millions of dollars endowment, engaged in educational work for backward races under the American flag.

Musical will be rendered by a quartet consisting of Ruby Smith, Dorothy Wilson, Halbach, W. Madison Taylor and John Chandler Smith, with Paul Gable at the organ. The Young People's Societies will meet in the evening at 8:30 o'clock, the Y. P. S. C. E. at 7:11 Tenth street and the S. S. C. E. in the parish house, 938 Grant place.

Mid-week service Thursday.

The mid-week meeting for conference and prayer will be held Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the parish house, 938 Grant place. The subject will be "The Kingdom of Heaven—How and When?"

The Rev. Charles S. Polling, copastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, of Pittsburgh, Pa., will occupy the pulpit at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow morning at the 11 o'clock worship. The Christian Endeavor Society will hold its regular weekly meeting at 7 o'clock in the evening in the church lecture room. Mid-week prayer service will be held Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Rev. William A. Vrooman, minister of the First Unitarian Church, Wilmington, Del., will occupy the pulpit of All Souls Unitarian Church at the 11 o'clock morning service, in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, who sailed for Europe Thursday.

His subject will be "The Kingdom of Heaven—How and When?" The feature at the motion picture hour in Pierce Hall at 7:30 o'clock in the evening will be "Chalkmarks."

Chey Chase Baptist.

"Jesus and the Modern Temper" will be the subject of the sermon by the Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor of the Chey Chase Baptist Church, tomorrow morning. A story sermon for the Junior Church is given each morning during the worship hour. A union vesper service will be held on the lawn of the Presbyterian Church in the evening. The Rev. J. H. Hillier, minister of the First Baptist Church, will preach. Five of the Chey Chase churches are cooperating in the service. The enrollment of the Church Vacation School has reached 90 scholars.

The Rev. John E. Briggs, the pastor, will preach at both the morning and evening service at Fifth Baptist Church tomorrow. His subject will be "The Kingdom of Heaven—How and When?"

was discussed again today at the convention of the Baptist Young People's

Union of America in an open forum presided over by Representative

Grant M. Hudson, of Michigan.

In marked contrast to the testimony of some of the delegates yesterday that there was much drinking among young people, speakers today asserted that they had found but little, especially among students.

Mary Mackrell, a student at Temple

University, told the conference that she had attended many affairs of her school and had never seen any student intoxicated.

A student of the University of Minnesota said there was some drinking at his college, but added that the students themselves were stamping out the practice.

Edgar R. May, social worker and delegate to the convention from Kansas City, who was among the speakers yesterday, said that he had made no specific charges of drinking among the young people of his home church, the West Side Branch of the First Baptist Church.

"I did not say drinking parties had been held in the basement of our church," said Mr. May, "but I did say

I had seen young people come into the social rooms of the west side branch who were under the influence of liquor.

However, they were not members of our church."

Mr. May endeavored to make it clear that his statements of yesterday had no reference to any special church and said he had given an explanation to the Rev. A. J. Haggett, pastor of the Kansas City church, who took exception to Mr. May's remarks.

"I wish to reiterate," said Mr. May,

"the statement that on certain occasions

I was practically ostracized because

I would neither drink nor smoke on parties with young people. These young people were church people, but I do not name any particular congregation."

Asserting that 3,000 members of the Baptist Young People's Union had pledged themselves to sobriety and lawful enjoyment, Representative

Hudson said it was the enthusiasm of the young people of America that made the eighteenth amendment possible.

Dr. A. T. Robertson, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Kentucky, biblical authority of national note, will deliver five addresses at the Hyattsville First Baptist Church, July 18 to 22, at 8 o'clock each evening. It was announced yesterday by the church.

The Rev. B. P. Robertson will speak at the 11 o'clock services tomorrow on the "Restoration of the Backslider," 200,000 evening services on "The Disposal of Jesus." Sunday school will open at 9:30 a. m., and the young people will meet at 7 p. m. The pastor will sail for England July 21, where he will pass his vacation.

STORM RIPOFF ROOFS, RUNNING VIRGINIA CROPS

Heavy Damage Results as Rain, Wind and Hail Sweeps State.

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., July 8.—Petersburg was visited last yesterday by one of the severest wind storms in several years. Much damage resulted. The wind, which at times attained almost cyclonic proportions, was accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain.

During the storm, which was more violent in the western part of the city, the roof of the city hall was torn off by the wind and three of them virtually destroyed. With the destruction of these sheds more than 200,000 pounds of tobacco was exposed.

The loss is estimated at several thousand dollars. Much damage was done to buildings in the city grounds, where the wind was so violent that a 6,000-pound circus wagon was blown 100 feet.

At the city home a number of sheds were leveled and roofs and chimneys of several houses blown off, entailing a heavy loss. The roof of the men's club at the city hall was blown off, and the roof of the city hall was blown off.

Some 300 telephone lines were put out of commission by falling poles and wires.

In the neighboring counties the storm also was severe and did much damage to crops and buildings. In Prince George County one man was struck by lightning, receiving only slight injuries. His residence was damaged by lightning while his barn was destroyed by the wind.

Danville, Va., July 8.—Tobacco farmers today were counting their losses in the city, from the city hall to the city hall, and the city hall was blown off.

Corn and tobacco, as well as fruit, were strewn about the city. The tops of automobiles to ribbons. No comprehensive estimate of loss can be given.

The worst hit are small tenants, who faced the best prospects in years and who were "marking" their crop, intending on paying fertilizer bills after they had realized on their product. Land owners saw curtailed returns. In some places fruit was battered off the trees.

At Martinsville the hailstones were as large as marbles and tore the tops of automobiles to ribbons. No comprehensive estimate of loss can be given.

CONTROL OF THE SENATE.

It is only natural that the troubles of the Republican party should be sweet to the Democrats. The insurgency of such men as Senator La Follette is much more attractive to the minority party than its own inability to restrain the independence of Burton K. Wheeler or Cole Blease. When the Wisconsin senator finds himself in complete disagreement with everything that President Coolidge has done, it is to be expected that there should be strenuous applause from the Democratic side of the aisle.

It appears, however, that the Democrats have read a little too much into the diatribe issued by Senator La Follette to maintain the tradition and magazine founded by his father. In it the young progressive made much of the "third-term" issue and little of the President's activities in the West. He announced, moreover, that the progressives did not intend to support the claims of William S. Vare and Frank L. Smith for the Senate. There was nothing unusual or unexpected in the statement. It certainly did not warrant the conclusion, drawn in some partisan quarters, that the Democrats would be able to organize the next Senate with progressive aid. Granted that the protestations of La Follette regarding the purity of progressive motives are true, it is not likely that he and his associates are going to surrender the privileges of organization. Senate patronage is not so lightly tossed off. Progressive aid in organization would not be rewarded with committee chairmanships by the Democrats. There are not enough places to go round, and deserving Democrats would be given the first call.

There is yet another contingency to be considered—the political wisdom of Democratic organization viewed in the light of the coming presidential campaign. Minority leaders might easily look the progressive gift horse in the mouth. Democratic control of the Senate would bring with it responsibilities which those in power would have to assume and the administration could escape. It would not be so easy to criticize the legislative acts of a party which lacked control of both branches of Congress. It is hardly wise for the Democrats to make merry over assistance that has not been actually offered, and which, if tendered, might have to be refused.

NEARLY THREE GALLONS EACH.

The ice cream industry, which, while consuming but 3.3 per cent of the milk produced in the United States, employs more than 50,000 persons and pays out in salaries more than $75,000,000 a year, did pretty well in 1926. Ice cream consumption throughout the country amounted to nearly 2,000,000 gallons more than in 1925, although the consumption per person fell off .03 gallons from the 1925 record of 2.80 gallons. The reason for this, says the Department of Agriculture, is that during six months of 1926 the weather as a whole was colder than in 1925.

It is interesting to note that in 1910 the estimated production of ice cream was about 95,000,000 gallons. Ten years later production had reached 260,000,000 gallons. Last year there was manufactured nearly 325,000,000 gallons, which represents an increase of 240 per cent in sixteen years.

The United States is a nation of ice cream eaters. Of recent years the phenomenon is particularly noticeable. Everybody eats it—plain, covered with sirup or fruit, incased in a jacket of chocolate, perched in a pastry cone or even stuck on the end of a stick. Men, women and children are alike, so far as their taste for the frozen confection is concerned.

EXIT BAN JOHNSON.

Ban Johnson passes from the picture of professional baseball. The owners of the American League, many of whom owe their place in commercialized sport to Johnson, have deposed the founder of the organization. He retires an old and broken man, with a record of achievement to sustain him. It might be said that he could ask for but little more.

This was not enough, however, for Johnson. He wanted to be the controlling force in the game which he did so much to establish, and his associates decided he could no longer be. Over a period of more than twenty years Johnson's word was law in the American League. The rival of the National League was the child of his brain. He saw it grow from an outlaw organization to one enjoying full and equal rank with the older body. The doing of it was not easy. Johnson had to fight opposition from within and without. He had to clean up baseball and make it attractive to a public which suspected its honesty.

All of these things Johnson did, and in doing so he made enemies within and without his own league. These men eventually insisted that baseball needed a bigger man than Johnson. Seven years ago they selected Kenesaw Mountain Landis as the supreme dictator of baseball. Johnson, used to playing a dictatorrial role, could not subordinate his will to that of Landis. It was apparent for years that one of the two would have to go.

Johnson went down fighting. Disciplined and threatened by his associates, he refused to abandon his place in the baseball sun or his feud with Landis. Orders from his league meant nothing to Johnson under such circumstances. He loved baseball too much. He has been shorn of all authority, but the imprint of his character can not be erased from the game he did so much to establish.

THE ROBERT McLENNAN CASE.

The immediate dismissal of incompetent persons responsible for the treatment of Robert McLennan is the duty of the District and Emergency Hospital authorities.

Robert McLennan was fatally injured on Monday in an automobile collision. The car with which he collided was driven by a police officer, who arrested McLennan and charged him with drunkenness. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where a member of the staff diagnosed his condition as one of alcoholism. From the hospital he was taken to a police station. Nearly six hours afterward he complained of severe pains, and an Emergency Hospital physician was called. This official stated that McLennan was "faking," but finally the man was sent to Gallinger Hospital, where a competent examination was made. It was found that his back and ribs were broken, and no signs of alcoholism were discovered. McLennan died of his injuries.

While accurate diagnosis and prompt treatment would not have saved this man's life, there was no excuse for the ignorance and brutality of those responsible for his care. The public may well shudder at the thought that any individual may, by accident, fall into the hands of the individuals who permitted McLennan to lie for hours without any attention except the brutal suggestion that he was shamming illness.

The people deserve protection against such treatment as was dealt out to Robert McLennan. The District and Emergency Hospital authorities should make an overhauling of their personnel.

A STORY-BOOK MURDER.

The Montgomery County murder mystery apparently is no nearer solution than it was immediately after the crime was committed. The victim, a prosperous dairyman, was shot down in cold blood by a stranger at dawn on Thursday morning. The only clue is a note, detailing an alleged indiscretion with an unnamed married woman, written in the form of a confession apparently designed for the murdered man to sign, found pinned upon the victim's back. This note, written on a typewriter with characters of unusually small size, affords hope for solution of the crime through finding the owner of the typewriter.

Not having found any evidence that the story contained in the confession is true, police are working on the theory that it was left with the body to distract attention. Here then is a story-book murder mystery—innocent victim, mysterious, black-garbed stranger, planted false evidence, and clue. Yet the crime is so gruesome and horrible that whatever story-book characteristics it may have are blotted out by grim reality.

Those whose duty it is to investigate the crime should leave no stone unturned until it is solved. The man who committed the murder is no ordinary criminal. The mind that conceived so enormous a crime will not stop at others. Fortunately the piece of typewriting affords a sure clue to the identity of the murderer, if the sleuths are shrewd and persistent enough to follow it up.

"TWENTY-SIX YEARS LATER."

One hundred and ten feet above the surface of the mound on which towers the Washington Monument is the mark that indicates where the first work of construction stopped. Many years elapsed between the date of that stoppage and the completion of the shaft. A change of the kind of stone used left a line which plainly shows where the old work was left off.

Twenty-six years after the date when the original construction stopped, because of exhaustion of funds, Congress decided that the shaft should be completed and work was again started.

In 1901 a carefully wrought out plan was prepared for the treatment of the landscape surrounding the monument. That plan met with general approval. But again the lack of funds interfered with the work, and "nothing was done." Now, by a strange coincidence, 26 years after the adoption of the plan for beautifying the grounds, that plan has been revived through the report of J. L. Nagel, one of the engineers of the Arlington Bridge Commission, which has just been laid before the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. This plan provides for sunken gardens on the north side and massive stone steps on the west, together with a circular reflecting pool between the shaft and Seventeenth street.

The 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington will be celebrated in 1932, by which time the Park and Planning Commission hopes it can complete the work of beautifying the grounds.

By 1932, also, it is probable that the Memorial Bridge will have been added to the beauties of the Potomac shores. Unless Congress is subjected to another attack of procrastination it is possible that the Washington Monument, started in 1848, will be in its complete setting on the 200th anniversary of Washington's birth.

HENRY FORD'S LATEST.

Henry Ford has demonstrated before this that he combines with the qualities that have made him one of the foremost men of his time certain naive characteristics exceedingly hard to explain. He is not always the hard-headed business man that one would expect a person of his accomplishments to be, nor does the sum of his knowledge and understanding always square with the public picture of the faculties which a man of his type should possess.

There was, for instance, the incident of the peace ship and its famous but ill-guided slogan, "Out of the trenches by Christmas." It was a form of idealistic idiosyncrasy that appealed tremendously to those rural editors who were a party to it, but it was hard then to understand in what fashion it appealed to the originator and producer of the cheapest American automobile.

Then came the day when Mr. Ford was at some difficulty to explain his conception of American history. The man who had revolutionized the entire business of manufacture and production characterized detailed knowledge of his country's past as "bunk," and displayed a profundity of ignorance that was refreshing. Probably as a result of that experience the motor magnate did become sufficiently interested in the history of Mother Goose to purchase the farm that sheltered the heroine of "Mary and Her Little Lamb."

And now Mr. Ford discovers that the exceedingly vigorous and bitter anti-Jewish campaign conducted by the Dearborn Independent had been better left undone. "Had I appreciated even the general nature, to say nothing of the details of these articles," he announces, "I would have forbidden their circulation without a moment's hesitation." The Dearborn Independent, it so happens, belongs to Mr. Ford. The anti-Jewish articles therein, which Mr. Ford now withdraws in full, ran over a period of several years. They created a storm reechoed in all quarters of the globe. Yet, in all that period, they appear to have escaped the notice of the owner and publisher. The naïvete of Mr. Ford as a publisher surpasses any of his previous demonstrations of simplicity. In the future he ought to have himself put on the mailing list of the Dearborn Independent.

A MISSISSIPPI SURVEY.

That an attempt at this time to enact legislation for the prevention of Mississippi floods would be abortive and useless has been pointed out by those best qualified to speak on the subject. Before Congress can act intelligently it is essential that a well-considered and carefully prepared program shall be perfected.

The Mississippi problem has been in the hands of the Mississippi River Commission, which consists of engineers of the Army and officials of other branches of the Government, for nearly 50 years. During this time no plan has been evolved which could meet the situation. When Congress meets in December it is certain that many bills will be offered, designed to solve the problem of flood control, but none of these bills can possibly offer an effective plan.

The problem never can be solved until more data are available than are now in hand. Foremost among the needs of the engineers to whom must be committed the task, after the politicians and amateur statesmen have made their contributions to the literature on the subject, are suitable topographic maps of the entire region. Few can conceive of the vastness of the empire which is tributary to the Father of Waters. Thirty-one of the 48 States contribute to the drainage that forms the Mississippi. The basin covers a total of 1,240,000 square miles, of which some 8,000 square miles are within the Dominion of Canada. Of this vast territory less than 14 per cent has been "adequately surveyed," according to the chief topographic engineer of the Geological Survey.

No topographic survey of Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee or Indiana has ever been completed. It is held that in order to determine the run-off of water in the several units of the basin the information afforded by maps showing the topography is essential. By making such maps before undertaking the enormous task of controlling the floods the errors of the past may be avoided and the expenditure of more millions in inadequate works prevented. It is admitted on all sides that the need for preventive measures is imminent and pressing, but before anything is possible in the way of permanent preventive measures it is quite as essential that those to whom the problem is to be submitted for solution should be supplied with every possible aid in the way of surveys and maps of the regions in which the floods have their origin.

To proceed without such would be comparable with a plan to build 1,000 miles of railroad without a map or a survey.

AIR AND RAIL COMBINES.

Immediately after the successful transatlantic flights of Lindbergh and Chamberlin, R. H. Ashton, president of the American Railway Association, made the prediction that freight would be transported by planes within a relatively short time. Now the fact has been made public that at least five great railroad systems are considering supplementing their rail passenger service with air passenger service, and have been in conference with the aviation division of the Department of Commerce relative thereto.

The development was made public by Assistant Secretary of Commerce MacCracken in a speech delivered before the Ohio Bar Association. He said further that while none of the companies has as yet actually completed arrangements for the service, nevertheless there is little doubt that substantial progress in this direction will be made within a year.

Mr. MacCracken predicts that railroads eventually will be forced to add the supplementary service, and that probably it will be done in conjunction with already established air transport companies. The greatest need for the fruit of passenger air lines, he says, is a strong administrative organization to carry on the routine work of selling tickets and caring for the business end of the enterprise. The railroad logically fulfills that mission, and this is the way in which it will gain entry into the air transport field.

Railroads learned a costly lesson from the motor bus. At one time they were secure, not only for long hauls, but also for the transportation of freight and passengers over short distances. When buses first appeared railroad officials did not take them seriously. Gradually the bus found public favor, and established itself firmly in short-haul work. When revenues began to drop off railroad officials took notice, and today railroad administrations are meeting motor competition by going in for bus operation themselves.

Commercial air transport is on the eve of great development, and the railroads will not again permit themselves to be caught napping. Looking at the American transportation picture of the future, one sees the public utilizing both air and rail, with the organized rail agencies serving all the needs of air transport.

The Prussian diet has a few Tom Blanton's of its own.

Brooklyn Eagle: We welcome as a naturalized citizen Capt. Guy Visse de Branc, the "ench" ace, who brought down eight German planes. He may come handy in an emergency.

Impossible to Guess.
Aitchison Globe: As is usually the case, the wheat fields are yielding a much larger harvest than the wise ones predicted would be the case. It's difficult to guess what Mother Nature will do.

The Old Story.
Indianapolis News: This is graduation week, and next week is the time the young grads look around for a good job that will pay enough to finance trips to all the football games from now on.

Silver Lining.
Indianapolis News: But even if prohibition has made hypocrites of druggists and doctors, as the pharmacists meeting at Philadelphia was told, just consider what a boon it has been to the bootleggers!

Electrical Signs.
Worcester Telegram: To abolish all electrical signs would mean a considerable decrease in public convenience. To impose no restrictions at all might easily lead to unsightly conglomerations. The difficulty is in drawing the line fairly for all concerned.

Egypt's Role.
Brooklyn Eagle: Egypt's Parliament has bowed to British power and will not cut the appropriation for the sirdar, but Zagiul Pasha makes conditions. Egypt will not yield her claims on the Sudan, though she does not press them. She is a past mistress of the art of watchful waiting, her role through most of the past centuries.

Motor-Proof Pedestrians.
Boston Transcript: A London writer offers a plan for the development of the motor-proof pedestrian. First he would make a census of all the people in the country who had been knocked down by motor cars and had come through more or less unscathed. "An act of parliament would then force intermarriage among these splendid, hardy folk. Their characteristics would be transmitted in an intensified form to their descendants, and in a few generations the country would consist of motorists and those whom motor cars could not injure.

"What would become of the other pedestrians? you ask. Oh, that's all right. We motorists would by then have dealt with them."

Poor Prospects.
St. Paul Pioneer-Press: Reds can't make converts of people whose chief concern is finding more enjoyable ways to spend idle hours.

Learning "United States."
New York Evening Post: The English actors who are seeking to learn how to talk "United States English" by listening to phonograph records of the speeches of President Taft and President Wilson may achieve their ambition by a much shorter cut. Let them remember that "a" is not pronounced like "i" "h's" are not dropped, "r'reely" is cockney and "I'm sorry" does not take the place of "Excuse me" or "Pardon me." Otherwise English is spoken in New York as it is in London.

Admirable!
Baltimore Sun: Sidney Cotton's persistent search for Nungesser and Coli is of the stuff that one admires. His mechanic has left him; his Indian guide asks 'impossibly high wages. But Cotton continues his daily flights inland over wild Newfoundland, facing alone the dangers which, one fears, explain the French fliers' disappearance. He may fail of success. He may even lose his own life in that desolate land. He will probably never be acclaimed as a nation's hero. But he keeps on with his work.

Germany's Penal Code.
Springfield Republican: An American jurist has aided in preparing the new penal code, now completed, after five years' work, which is to be adopted by Germany and Austria, except that Austria will dispense with the death penalty altogether, while it is to be retained in Germany for murder and high treason. The new code is believed to represent the most authoritative views of modern penology, and it will deserve thorough study in this country. Specially notable is the wide latitude given to judges in determining sentences.

On Voting.
Minneapolis Journal: Suppose the people of the United States couldn't vote, were deprived of the right to cast their ballots. How insistent, how imperious would be their demand that the right be restored!

But they have the right, and about half of them don't use it. This indifference to the use of a great and vital privilege is a real menace.

If those who don't vote were punished by the loss of the right to vote, what an outcry they would make! Yet it may come to that or something like it.

It would not be fair to give Albania the credit for any such subtle diplomatic move. Mussolini's fine hand can clearly be seen in the development of the situation. And if Italy should now assume the part of friendly mediator between Albania and Yugoslavia, in the interests of peace in the Balkans and good will toward all the world—well, Machiavelli himself would have no cause to feel ashamed of these ultra-modern practitioners of his art.

TOWN CRYING.
Hog-calling contest in this county will have to take a back seat as the recent town crier event of Pewsey, England, is noised abroad, says the Evansville Journal. Pewsey is a small place, but it was full of big noise when 24 human loud speakers competed for the silver championship cup and a handful of golden sovereigns.

The event was run off much like a tournament of old. There was a parade, enlivened by practice cries and colorful with gay costumes and uniforms. The cries came from England and Wales. Some were authentic costumes form the thirteenth century. Contestants, listening spectators and judges all marched to a great field, accompanied by a carillon of bells. The judges' tent was placed 200 yards away from the criers' platform. The contestants were invisible, so the judges could not be biased by gorgeousness of costume or any other personal feature. Purity and loudness of tone and clarity of enunciation were the points used in judging. The loudest-voiced crier there, whose range is said to be seven miles, lost the prize because of poor enunciation. The test piece ran as follows: "Oyez, oyez, oyez! Found at Pewsey district carnival the biggest and brightest spectacle in the south west of England, where a wee of revelry and pageantry reigns supreme and a procession of stupendous proportions passes through scenes of fairyland midst a blaze of brilliant illumination; a revival of the time-honored town crier, the means of announcing royal proclamations, the earliest advertising medium and the original form of broadcasting. God Save the King!"

All we have to say is that we'd like to hear an American hog-caller and a railroad train announcer tackle that! Our hats are off to the victors in that contest.

19 PAIRS OF SHOES.

Starting at the feet, a recent newspaper article defines one of the characteristics of a "gentleman" as the possession of nineteen pairs of shoes and boots and two pairs of slippers, says the Christian Science Monitor. To many a reader, however, the gentleman's nineteen pairs of shoes and boots—almost anybody can have two pairs of slippers—will seem, on second thought, an embarrassment of riches. His shoe wardrobe presupposes a shoe master, shrewd to select the shoes suitable to what some of the radio announcers would call his employer's "program." In this forest of trees (as the artificial feet are called) that wear these shoes and boots when not in use the owner himself might easily get lost, and wish himself father with his single pair of cowhides. There are no doubt some such gentlemen, who, having achieved the shoe wardrobe, can not quite finance a valet. Happily the writer of the article assures us that the average man if he counted his shoes, would be surprised to find that he has more pairs than he thought—which leads further to the comforting conclusion that the astonished investigator may be more of a gentleman than he had imagined.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

The Third-Term Phantom.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are the Democrats nursing the third-term phantom with the intention of trotting it out in case Coolidge should be chosen? Not much is said about it in the papers just now. I wonder if the phantom that once sent cold shivers down the spine of the people has gone into perpetual hiding, or has just taken a rest preparatory to the opening of the active campaign. What is there, after all, in this third-term nightmare? Senators and members of the House are elected term after term, some serving thirty or forty years, and it is regarded as being all right. In fact, if he has served well the people think their affairs are safer in his hands than in those of a new man. Why, then, do we scare at a presidential third term? Two of our Presidents were elected twice. Was the country not well served by each? Would not each of them have served equally well for a third term?

A THIRD TERMER.
Says Britain Needs Bigger Navy.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the editorial in The Post headed "Bigger Navies, Not Smaller," and without commenting on whether you are laying a foundation—or attempting so to do—for Congress to contribute further to the "steel corporations," I would call your attention to Uncle Sam's big fleet of idle destroyers, lined up in symmetrical rows in San Diego Harbor. There are 76 vessels in the out-of-commission fleet.

It seems to me, and to a great many taxpayers who are not "long-haired men" or short-haired women, that there is a defined propaganda, apparently well financed, to induce Congress to spend money unnecessarily for ships—whether warships, cruisers, destroyers or subs—and at the same time to induce Congress not to appropriate money for maintaining an adequate merchant marine. Why this on your part?

You and I know, and all thinking people know, that there is a better reason for England having more ships than the United States. The reason is quite obvious and does not need comment.

HENRY LANG.

Third Term—The People Will Decide.
To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The young man La Follette sees great danger to the country in letting a man serve more than eight years as President because through the influence of patronage delegates from the South could be influenced. The young man seems to take a nomination and an election as one and the same thing. Nomination does not always mean an election. After all, if a bad man should happen to be elected, and then re-nominated, the remedy is in the hands of the voters. They can defeat him.

This is said to be a government by the people, and if a majority of the people desire a man for a third, or even a fourth term, what objection can there be? It is a question wholly for the people. Mr. La Follette is one of those who have been advocating the election of President and Vice President by popular vote. Suppose that method should be adopted, and then a majority of the popular vote should decide for a third term? What right would he have to complain? If a majority of the people do not approve of Mr. Coolidge's administration they will see to it that he is not elected should he be re-nominated. If they do approve of it, his reelection would not be dangerous to the country, for he would be the agent of the people who chose him.

AMOCO-GAS

From New York to Eisleben, Germany—3905 miles in a straight line—a world's record for any type of airplane—and it was made with AMOCO-GAS.

When Chamberlin and Levine took off from the Long Island flying field, the spectators were astounded by the speed and ease with which their heavily-loaded plane gained altitude. Swiftly, surely, the Bellanca plane climbed to a height which foretold success for their daring attempt to establish a long-distance flying record.

AMOCO-GAS provided the quick, sure getaway for the Columbia—gave it the power which enabled it to get off and up to safe height in far less time than experienced observers thought possible.

But the quick, sure getaway was no surprise to those who knew and used AMOCO-GAS whether in the air or on the ground. Every motorist who has ever tried AMOCO-GAS knows how instantly it answers every call—in traffic, on the hills, wherever he is and wherever he may go!

Drive on the motor fuel that makes and breaks records—AMOCO-GAS, first in its field, first in performance, first in economy!

Barnhardt Is Shifted To Hawaiian Post

Brig. Gen. George C. Barnhardt, who succeeded Brig. Gen. S. D. Rockenbach recently as commander of the district of Washington, was transferred yesterday to command of the Twenty-second brigade in Hawaii, with headquarters at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. Reason for the transfer of Brig. Gen.

Barnhardt from here is not yet known other than that he is due for foreign service. He will succeed Brig. Gen. Stuart Heinzelman in Hawaii, who will go to Fort Totten, N. Y., to command the Second Coast Artillery division. Brig. Gen. Barnhardt's local successor is not yet known.

Division Files to New York. Assistant Secretary of War Davidson flew to New York last night with Capt. Ira C. Baker, Army Pan-American officer of Bolling Field, and Mrs. Baker.

COURT RULE DISPOSES OF HUTCHINS LAWSUIT

Trustee Ordered to Pay Back
$2,000 Received as Sales Commission.

HELD LIABLE TO ESTATE

Justice Jennings Bailey, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, yesterday disposed of the suit brought by Charles H. Merrill, as one of the trustees of the estate of Stilson Hutchins and Walter Stilson Hutchins, son of Stilson Hutchins, against Meyer Cohen, also one of the trustees of the Stilson Hutchins estate, by signing a decree in the case prepared by John E. Laskey, counsel for Messrs. Merrill and Hutchins. The judge declined to sign a decree prepared by Frank Hogan and William G. Johnson, representing defendants.

Under the terms of the decree Cohen is ordered to pay back to the estate $2,000 which he is alleged to have received as his share of the commission on the sale of the Highlands and Westmoreland apartment houses. In ruling on this, Justice Bailey said, "It was a profit which he made as trustee out of the trust estate, and I do not think that he had any right to take that money, and he is liable to the trust estate for it."

The court ruled, in regard to allegations in the bill of complaint that Cohen had placed influence on various properties of the estate in companies from which he received commissions, that there was no proof of this charge. It also held that Cohen had not acted in bad faith in accepting the $2,000 commission on the real estate sale, and that therefore the petition that he be removed as a trustee should be denied. The decree sets forth, however, that the plaintiffs shall recover their costs in the case from Cohen.

$20,000 Sought in Suit.

Anne Lazarow, 1351 Taylor street northwest, filed suit yesterday in Circuit Court against Joseph Gull, 8719 Thirteenth street northwest, to recover $20,000 damages for alleged personal injuries. The suit was filed by Gull's attorney, Burnett & Goldstein, who say that the defendant's automobile collided with one in which she was riding at Fourteenth and Taylor streets northwest on January 14.

The Housekeeper

SATURDAY comes again, and with it our realization that a meal that is something of a holiday meal, must be planned for and prepared on the morrow. I have tried this Saturday to plan for our column a menu that will indeed give to the homemaker as well as to other members of the family a work-free day on a Sunday. And if the gentleman who is the head of the house feels and says, as I have heard many number of them, say in the years that I have realized housekeeping is a fact, that "cold food is not his idea of a Sunday dinner," inform him that this is a deviation and not the usual meaning of the word, "dinner," and that this occasion of food on Sunday is to be a cold supper, with sandwiches and milk or tea in the middle of the day, if his inner man demands indulgence.

So for our Sunday dinner let us on Saturday cook a ham tenderloin.

MENU.

Stuffed Celery, Ripe Olives, Mounded Salad, Cold Sliced Ham, Potato Chips, Cottage Cheese, Nut Bread, Blackberry Jam, Ice Box Cake, Iced Tea or Iced Coffee.

First, before the recipes, a word about the foods suggested in this menu. The ham may be purchased on Saturday—just in, today, and simmered for its hour and a half to two hours after we have completed the labors connected with the evening meal. It should then be allowed to cool in the liquid in which it was cooked for the remainder of the night and in the morning re-heated to a platter and placed on a low shelf in the ice box. The morning re-heated ham is a delicious meat rather than a tasteless, dry one. The jelly sauce may be made by combining canons to which a tablespoon of gelatin has been added. To be a little more explicit, we open the soup, add the usual amount of equal part water and bring the whole to a boil. Add the gelatin soaked in a third cup of cold water and set aside until cool. Place in the ice box until the mixture forms a jelly. Serve with lemon juice. The cottage cheese will have been made in the morning and set aside until cool. Place in the ice box until the mixture forms a jelly. Serve with lemon juice. The nut bread may, of course, be made the day before. It is one of the breads that make at home that lends itself nicely to servings one or two days after baking, for the nuts keep the bread moist. Keep it, however, in a closed container. The recipe for stuffed celery is quite recent. I think I remember correctly, but if not, the celery is thoroughly cleaned and each stalk stuffed with a mixture of cream (Philadelphia cream), cheese mixed with mashed pimento and aavoring of Worcestershire sauce. The recipe for the salad and the ice box cake follow:

Mounded Salad.

Soak one tablespoon of granulated gelatin in a fourth cup of cold water. Add two tablespoons of white vinegar, a tablespoon of lemon juice, a fourth cup of sugar, a teaspoon of salt and a dash of paprika. Then add two cups of boiling water, stir well and set the mixture aside after straining through a close sieve. When this mixture begins to set add the following ingredients which have previously been prepared:

4 pimentos chopped to a fine pulp.
1/2 cup of cooked green peas.
1/2 cup small pieces of cooked cauliflower.
1 cup very finely shredded raw cabbage.
1 cup finely chopped parsley.
1/2 cup cooked string beans.
1/4 cup finely chopped green sweet pepper.
1 hard cooked egg, the white chopped fine and the yolk forced through a sieve.
When these ingredients have been combined and added to the gelatin mixture and the whole has chilled and formed a firm jelly, unmold on a platter garnished with lettuce leaves and surround with rings of pepper and stuffed olives. Scoop out a bit of the jelly at the very crest of the mound. The mold is a rounded one, as it should be for the best effect, and place the indentation a little heap of mayonnaise. On it sprinkle paprika and serve at once. This salad contains the vegetables necessary to supply our need of vegetables for the one substantial meal of our Sunday.

Ice Box Cake.

This recipe came to us from Mrs. Minkie, of Washington, some months ago, and is an excellent one:

1 pound of unsalted butter.
1 cup pulverized sugar.
2 squares chocolate (melted).
Whites of 6 eggs, beaten stiff.
Yolks of 6 eggs, well beaten.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
2 1/2 dozen lady fingers, split in half.

CHAPTER LXIII.

The Gallant Gesture.

CHRISTINE took a street car, in accordance with the directions of the reception clerk in the establishment where Lewis had been employed. His address was written on a card in her handbag.

She scarcely noticed the dirty, dingy section through which she was passing. Her brain was awfully bewildered and complete.

That Lew—splendid, honorable, self-sacrificing—should be on the verge of marrying, when he was dangerously ill, and, according to the reception clerk, almost hopelessly ill, was an incredible thought.

Christine tried painfully to recall his phrasing in the first letter she had received from him, asking for his freedom.

"I can not relinquish the future that is in store for me," he had written. "It is beyond human power. Will you communicate with me as soon as possible? I can not wait much longer."

And in the letter that she had received the day before, he had said: "I feel that there should be no delay."

Did he mean—Christine shuddered—that he feared there was very little time for happiness left him? For surely he had written: "There is some one else."

Christine descended at the corner that the conductor indicated as her destination. She walked half a block we'll go to the court house and see what is to be done."

"Should you go out?" she asked, anxiously.

"Oh, yes, I go out, sometimes, to get medicines and things. I can't ask too much of my landlady. She's kind enough as it is."

"But your—fiancee? Can't she bring you things?"

"Oh, yes, yes," he said, hastily; "but—well, it's good for me to get an airing on fair days."

"Poor Lew," she whispered, under her breath. "Dear old friends! Aloud she said: 'If you will tell me where to find your clothes, I will lay them out for you, so that you won't tire yourself too much before we start. Then, I'll go down and sit in the parlor until you're ready.'"

He told her where to find his garments. She laid them out, noting the shabbiness of them.

She went downstairs, more and more puzzled. Was Lew going to marry a wealthy woman? How else could he contemplate matrimony, when he was ill, jobless, and had so little money, judging by his wardrobe and his cheap room?

His parlor was damp and odorous; his horsehair furniture and a cluster of wax flowers under a glass dome were his most salient features, except for several enormous crayon engravings in broad, gilt frames on the walls. One of these, a gentleman with flowing mustache, was draped in black. The land-along a dingy street in a poor neighborhood. At the number written on the card, she found a buxom, middle-aged woman, with her hair in curlers, wearing a soiled red sweater over a gingham dress.

"Mr. Hayes? Yes, he lives here," she surveyed Christine's trimness admiringly. "Will you step upstairs—first door to the left on the top floor."

Christine gingerly mounted the dark stairs and felt her way with the help of a shaky rail. She knocked at the first door on the left on the top floor.

Lewis' voice—almost too weary to be recognizable—called:

"Come!"

She entered a narrow, dingy room with one window. A young factory building next door cut off most of the light. The window was opened wide and the room was brightly lit. Lewis lay in bed, under a heap of frayed blankets. His hair was matted and his eyes seemed burning against the pallor of his gaunt face.

"Lew," cried Christine, with a sob in her throat, and he said wonderingly: "Christie! How did you get here? Why did you come?"

She went to his bedside, drew up a shabby chair and seated herself, taking both his cold, thin hands in her warm clasp.

"Lew, why didn't you tell me you were ill?"

"He smiled wearily.

"I hoped you would never know, because—well, you're such a quixotic little thing. I knew you'd do the very thing you have done—run here and want to do something for me."

It was on the tip of Christine's tongue to say: "But you need some one to look after you." She checked herself, remembering the other woman, who surely must minister to his needs. Her eyes roved about the room. Its cheapness and untidiness, its untidiness distressed her. Why didn't the woman see that it was better kept, even if the landlady was lax?

Christine looked at the dresser. There was no feminine photograph there.

"I've come to do as you asked, Lew," she said, gently. "I got your letter yesterday. I—I've been very busy before, or I'd have seen to everything sooner."

His eyes brightened.

"Then we must hurry, so that you won't have to stay too long. I don't think it will take long. I'll get up, and

Conduct and Common Sense

By ANNE SINGLETON

EXPLOITING GRIEF

I HAVE lately been shocked and distressed by the sudden and desolately expensive decisions forced upon people of the poorer class (or any class) who have just lost a relation. A family plunged unexpectedly into mourning, and living in close quarters (where the sickness and death of a member are events difficult to cope with), has a terrible time. Funeral parlors would appear to meet this situation—but at what a price? And every arrangement, particularly for those who are afraid to depart from what undertakers tell them is the only proper convention, is an unduly expensive arrangement.

People who are born and brought up in the great world know how to defend themselves. They say, "I will have a simple box, one of those awful caskets, weighing a ton and costing a fortune." Or they say, "Cremation is clean and quick." They arrange the funeral entirely as they wish. They direct how and where it shall take place. They refuse flowers, if they prefer not to have them. But the poor are not judged by the funeral director, and by the fear that they will be criticized by their neighbors if they do not spend money like water as a sign of respect and affection for the deceased.

I call it heartbreaking. I know a family who lost a younger member lately. The cost of the casket and the pine box, a satin pillow, three services for the dead, a plot of ground, the transportation of the body, the digging of the grave, the floral tributes, the different fees must have come to over $500. Half of this might have been saved.

A pine box, fitted with handles and painted a silvery gray would have been to my mind, a much more suitable and better looking receptacle. If it had been one of my family, I should have lined it with a soft quilt and put a small pillow of my own in it. I should not have kept open reception in any funeral parlor for four days. I should have had one service. I should have brought trailing ivy to cover the box and plant on the grave. Real sorrow and real simplicity can afford the courage to say "no" to all this expensive funeral urged upon overtaxed feelings by the undertakers. Good taste is manifested in this simplicity. I shall be cremated, if my family mind box, and I shall haunt them if they don't.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

"I DIDN'T THINK AND I FORGOT." The weakest excuse of all the lot. Are: "I didn't think" and "I forgot." Worn and weary and haggard and pale, They follow the path of the men who fail—

In thread-bare raiment from place to place They've dogged the steps of the human race. In most of the blunders which men have made This pitiful part a part have played.

A man cries out on disaster's brink: "I should have stopped but I didn't." Was the barn door locked last night? "Was not." And somebody mutters: "Oh, I forgot!" Since Adam and Eve and the world began This pair have followed the trail of man.

The commonest phrases in printer's ink Are "I forgot" and "I didn't think."

Mr. Work's Pointer On Auction Bridge

THE pointer for today is: THREE ACES WITHOUT SIDE STRENGTH IS SUFFICIENT FOR A NO TRUMP. BUT SOMETIMES WORKS BADLY: THREE ACES WITH SIDE STRENGTH, APT TO PRODUCE GAME, IS TOO STRONG TO PASS.

Yesterday's Hand.

♠ A-9-7
♥ A
♦ 10-6-3
♣ A-Q-J-8-2

My answer all reads:

No. 17. South (Dealer) should bid one No Trump.

No. 18. South one Spade; West should bid two Clubs.

No. 19. South one Heart, West pass; North should bid one No Trump.

No. 20. After three passes; East should bid one Club.

My reason in support of these declarations are:

No. 17. A close choice between one Club and one No Trump, but from a love score this hand needs little assistance to produce game at No Trump.

and considerable assistance to produce game at Clubs. The defenseless suit contains three cards and, therefore, is not a serious menace. While a bid of one Club would not be criticized, it is the type of hand with which bold bidding is apt to be rewarded; and one No Trump is preferred.

No. 18. After an adverse Spade, a No Trump seems dangerous. It is rarely wise to bid No Trump over an adverse suit when holding but one stopper in that suit, unless the partner has previously bid. With but a single Heart, a double can not be considered and, therefore, two Clubs seems the sound declaration.

No. 19. Partner having bid a Major of which the hand contains but a singleton, a take-out is advisable even considering the fact that the singleton is the Ace of partner's suit. To take out with two Clubs would deny No Trump assistance outside of the Club suit. The partner's bid shows side strength, and the No Trump is, therefore, the sound declaration.

No. 20. Once again we have a choice between a No Trump and a Club, but for a pass by partner, the Club seems to be sounder and is, therefore, given the preference.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. W. A. EVANS

KEEP BABIES COOL IN HOT WEATHER.

IN very hot weather babies are likely to have fever, even though they are not otherwise sick. Restlessness and irritability, crying and fretting will sometimes cause the parents to suspect fever. The clinical thermometer confirms the suspicion. Oftentimes there will be fever without any evidence of it, so far as behavior is concerned. This observation brings with it two suggestions.

The first is that when during hot weather, the baby is cross, the mother should take his temperature. The second is that, when babies are found to have fever during hot weather it does not follow that he is in for a serious spell. If there are no other symptoms, all the mother need do is to strip the baby down to one garment—the diaper. In a study of this question made by Drs. Dood and Wilkins, it was found to be advisable to go a step further in some cases. They cured this mild heat fever in some babies by the simple expedient of putting a chunk of ice in a tub in the room and then setting a fan so that the hot air of the room was blown over the ice.

In Germany there are places where the babies are kept in cool cellars during the very hot weather. In New York City they make use of old ships as floating day nurseries where babies can be kept in the cool air of the river front during very hot weather. In Chicago there is a day creche located on the edge of the lake in Lincoln park. In Rochester, N. Y., babies are kept in a hospital situated at the water's edge on the lake a few miles away. In some baby hospitals the wards are cooled during the hot weather.

The time may come when we will spend as much money in hot weather to keep babies cool as we now spend in cool weather to keep them warm.

HIS CURE FOR COLDS.

T. R. writes: I feel I am entitled to the hundred million in spot cash. I do not know a cure for colds, but I have found a positive preventive for myself. I am cold-proof.

All my life I had suffered from severe colds. Each winter I would have one cold after another. I have found inhaling turpentine is a preventive. I simply remove the cork from the bottle and take a deep inhalation, then through one nostril and then the other. I use it as old-fashioned smelling salts. I do this each morning and before retiring, and when colds are very prevalent and every one around me has a cold, I smell it more often. When I have feared I had taken cold and smelled turpentine often, I have sometimes had a slight irritation in my nose. One greasing has always cured this.

Not one single cold have I had since I made the discovery, nor have I had tonsillitis. My colds usually started with a severe sore throat. I always smell it before going where there are many people and I never fail to smell it on my return.

I have tried to spread the glad tidings; I have told every one I knew, but no one believes me. They wait until they have a cold before trying it. It is too late then. I found this great remedy by accident. It has been worth a hundred million dollars to me and I would be much pleased if every sufferer would find it as helpful.

REPLY.

I hope the man with the hundred millions will be convinced.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Speaking of Elks.

JEAN loves an Elk who loves Elks better than he loves Jean—or so she thinks. Jean can "take him or let him alone" as there is another—a perfect lover who wants Jean. But this Elk has points, even if he does forget dates to attend Elk rallies so Jean asked us what it would be like to be the wife of a really loyal Elk (as if we should know that). Well, anyway, the ink at the Elks' club will be running low for we have a batch of letters from there—and one letter from a woman physician, who is strong for this Elk person. In all this maze of opinion poor Jean will probably stay single and save her reason.

Dear Miss McDonald:—For the love of Pete—what is wrong with these James like your friend Jean? If this man ran around with other girls, I could understand. But the poor thing is just a plunger, working his head off to get a home for her—while she is sizing up his points, and asking the neighbors if he is a good bet. Women make me madder and madder every time I think of them. Here's an Elk that would not have Jean—and even if he were a really good fellow, I wouldn't care to marry him. I have heard of a few who would, but I don't know any of them. And if he arrived 10:55 she would have been there composed as if he were a saint. She would not let him think she was the least bit disturbed or had missed him in the least. And he, poor dumb thing, would tell her she was not disturbed and would have no idea that she was eating her heart out for a little extra attention. Do Jean, before you pass up your "babe" have a little fun with him. Rock the boat a little. Sit down and think it over. What would you tell your other girl to do under the circumstances. Then put the program of yourself. You'll be surprised. An Elk is just a man you know! So make her worry!

BEAUTY AND YOU

By VIOLA PARIS

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

DEAR VIOLA PARIS: Will you please tell me what to do about gray hair? I have been using sage tea as a last resort after every shampoo, but this does not seem to prevent my hair from turning. I do not wish to use dyes. I am not yet out of my twenties, and my hair should be dark brown. BETTY.

Answer—Sage tea is a form of dye. When used in sufficient quantities it does have a darkening effect upon the hair, and it gives a dyed look, too. If I were you, I should not use anything. Try rather to get at the cause. Are you in ill health or suffering from over-fatigue? Are you worrying needlessly? These things not only cause gray hair in young people, a good tonic devised to stimulate the color cells, together with the best of care for both scalp and general health, would constitute the most sensible program. (This, I think, answers a number of queries on gray hair.)

DEAR VIOLA PARIS: For reducing, I have been told that a few drops of iodine in milk or lemon juice, taken before breakfast, is very good. Is this harmful? What would you suggest in a medical line for reducing? Please don't advise exercise, as I have more than enough of that.

Answer—It would be extremely unwise to use anything of the sort, for iodine on the breast, as I have said before, is harmful. It has no reducing effect.

MRS. C. W.

DEAR VIOLA PARIS: What can I do to tell, from your description, what cause the blotches. However, they are dark skin might both respond to bleaching treatment. There are many good preparations on the market made by specialists of recognized standing. Perhaps you would like to try the following treatment:

Take 3 tablespoons of either orange juice, cornmeal, or almond meal. Mix with 2 tablespoons of strained lemon juice and add enough water to make it a smooth paste. Rub a little cream on the skin, then apply this paste. Leave the pack on thoroughly dry, then wash off with warm water, finishing with cold water.

B. B.—You are so much overweight that I could not possibly take the responsibility of advising you. You ought to follow the advice of your physician.

Constance Talmadge Will Seek Divorce

Los Angeles, July 8 (A.P.).—The Examiner says Constance Talmadge, film star, twice disappointed in foreign marriages, will file suit for divorce soon against Capt. Alastair Mackintosh, formerly of the British army and a native of Scotland.

In telling her plans for a divorce Miss Talmadge said she and her husband still were good friends and that her divorce complaint would contain no sensational charges. It will charge desertion, she said.

The decision of the screen star to dissolve the international marriage came as no surprise to friends, for she and her husband have been separated since last September.

MODISH MITZI

"There won't be much room for suitcases in the car, Mitzi," says Dad, "so don't pack a whole lot of coats and things." Mitzi agrees. She'll just take the flowered georgette negligee with the taffeta flounces, that takes so little room. And for evening she will have to take a wrap of some kind.

Mitzi Packs a Full Suitcase.

This scarf wrap will take up very little room, it's like those first made by Reboux. Though it looks as though it were a wrap, it is practically a shawl, the effect is entirely in the way it is worn. It packs very well, and can be shaken out in a minute with no wrinkles remaining.

Mitzi Packs a Full Suitcase.

For her bathing suit she must take a coat that belongs to it. It is of wool jersey and the quilted effect on the suit and the coat is made by stitching in contrasting thread. Dad won't mind her taking two coats. But how is she to pack her silk coat, and her flannel jacket?

Mitzi Packs a Full Suitcase.

Her flannel coat she'll wear. The only trimming is of stitching, on the collar, the cuffs and pockets. She has packed about four coats that she simply had to have. Dad will make an awful fuss about there being an extra bag—but he'll find room for it—even if he checks out his golf bag. Dad's that way!
